DETAILED ACTION

Election/Restrictions

1. Restriction to one of the following inventions is required under 35 U.S.C. 121:
  - I. Claims 1-10, drawn to a connector for a ribbon cable, classified in class 439, subclass 495.
  - II. Claim 10, drawn to a continuous ribbon, classified in class 439, subclass 596.
  - III. Claims 12-16, drawn to a mating connector, classified in class 439, subclass 493.

The inventions are distinct, each from the other because of the following reasons:

2. Inventions II and I are related as subcombinations disclosed as usable together in a single combination. The subcombinations are distinct from each other if they are shown to be separately usable. In the instant case, invention II has separate utility such as the use with a separate wires or any other conductive element. The invention II does not have to be used with a ribbon cable of the invention I since the invention II is only reciting two plates mutually connected by an integral flexible connecting piece at an edge. See MPEP § 806.05(d).
3. Inventions III and I are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case, the connector of the invention I is different than the mating connector of the invention II because the connector of the invention I comprises a ribbon cable received in between two plates while the mating connector of the invention II comprised of many parts such as a housing with guide elements, contact elements, and a slider with an insertion opening and an actuation surface.
4. Inventions III and II are unrelated. Inventions are unrelated if it can be shown that they are not disclosed as capable of use together and they have different modes of operation, different functions, or different effects (MPEP § 806.04, MPEP § 808.01). In the instant case the different inventions are a continuous ribbon and a connector. The continuous ribbon of the invention II is simply two plates mutually connected by an integral flexible connecting piece at an edge. While the connector of the invention III is a connector comprised of many parts such as a housing with guide elements, contact elements, and a slider with an insertion opening and an actuation surface.

5. Because these inventions are distinct for the reasons given above and have acquired a separate status in the art because of their recognized divergent subject matter, restriction for examination purposes as indicated is proper.
